WORD WAR

(English Debate)

Event Description: Decades of academic research have proven that the benefits that occur as a result of engaging in the debate are numerous. Debate provides experiences that are conducive to life-changing, cognitive, and presentational skills. In addition, through debate debaters acquire unique educational benefits as they learn and polish skills far beyond what can be learned in any other setting. At the very least, debate helps learners to see the power of deploying rational, reasoned arguments and compelling evidence in action. It enables them to elucidate their standpoint by utilizing rhetorical eloquence. It instills in debaters a great sense of poise and confidence. It teaches them the skills of researching, organizing, and compellingly presenting the information.

Poetry Party.

Event Description: Poetry has always been a part of human life. It is an art that has existed in man's soul and spirit since the beginning of time. Poet always writes about their personal life and experiences. They write because they have an indispensable desire in their heart to express their ideas to objectify their poetic philosophy about life.

The English poet Shelly said, "A poem is the very image of life expressed in its eternal truth...". The profound truth in this line written by Shelly can be seen in the poetry of all the classical poets, from Homer to Shakespeare. The writing of great poetry has been the primary vehicle for expressing one's thoughts, observations, historical events, and various philosophies from different perspectives about life.

Laugh Mantra (Stand Up Comedy)

Event Description: Yeah, yeah, you're pretty funny. But it's one thing to make some of your friends laugh at a party. It's another ballgame to get on a stage in front of an audience and do stand-up comedy. To do any kind of live performance, you need to have a strong ego and nerves of steel. To do stand-up comedy, you need to be virtually insane. Almost everybody bombs the first time. There's a common misconception that stand-up comics do nothing all day and tell little stories to drunken audiences at night. It's A LOT tougher than that. Stand-up comics spend hours every day working on and perfecting their routines, and they have to be able to read their audience to know precisely what kind of humor they'll respond to. Before you stand in front of the infamous brick wall, you will need some guidance. To begin, you need to know the general vocabulary associated with stand-up comedy.

Grammar Nazi

(Just a minute)

Event Description: People get corrected on their language all the time. With written language, this is mostly about spelling and punctuation. In some cases, though, – especially when speaking – we’re pulled up on our grammar. Whatever you think about “grammar Nazis”, there are some times when they are just plain wrong. Here are five examples of grammar you may have been pulled up on which make no sense at all, grammatically speaking.

Registration: 300/-

- Other participants can raise objections based on their findings and present them.
- JAM Master would make the decision based on their observation.
- If the first participant is found guilty, his time would be stopped, and the participant who caught the error will continue to speak.
- The winner would be the one who gets the maximum timeout of one 1minute.

Tell a Tale (Fast Stories)

Event Description: The reader's experience is not just about the timeline in your story—whether your story describes an hour, one day, or three decades. It's about how fast or slow the time seems to pass. It's subjective. A fast-paced story keeps readers on the edge of their seats, eager to know what's happening. There's a lot of action. The storytelling is vivid and dramatic. In contrast, a slow-paced story is more atmospheric. The author takes ample time to describe the scenery. Scenery descriptions can be beautiful and engaging, but if the description isn't compelling or the sentences jar, readers start yawning.

Registration: 300/-

Team Size: Individual
